More infoAntibiotic use and incidence of Clostridium difficile infection: a nationwide population-based study. The aim of this study was to determine whether differences in antibiotic use are associated with changes in incidence of Clostridium difficile infection (CDI) in Dutch hospitals. We collected data on all hospitalized patients in the Netherlands from 2005 to 2010. Using data from the Dutch national microbiological database (NIVEL), we computed the standardized antibiotic use rate for each calendar year. We used regression analyses to study the association of antibiotic use with overall CDI incidence and CDI incidence by age, sex, type of infection (community-acquired, healthcare-associated, or nosocomial), and colonization. The antibiotic use rate increased from 4.7% to 7.2%, peaking in 2009. Overall incidence increased from 53.3 per 100,000 in 2005 to 56.8 per 100,000 in 2010. CDI incidence increased in all subpopulations, with nosocomial CDI incidence increasing most (from 12.8 to 18.4 per 100,000). An increase in antibiotic use was associated with an increase in CDI incidence in age groups
